The Annual Meeting on Clinical Trials in Intensive Care, or Noosa, has long been regarded as the pivotal event on the CTG's calendar. This working meeting provides a forum for the presentation, discussion, and development of intensive care research proposals, the presentation of results and updates on current CTG studies, and didactic elements centred on the advancement of clinical research methods in critical illness. For those with an emerging or established interest in critical care research, the Noosa meeting is an opportunity to be an active member of the CTG network and benefit from the collective experience and expertise of the trials group.

The annual ICU Research Coordinator Workshop is a unique and highly-valuable education forum and provides an opportunity for ICU Research Coordinators to network, share ideas and experiences, and further the development of research coordination as a specialised area of critical care research.

The Paediatric Study Group Meeting provides the opportunity for members of the Paediatric research community to gather and discuss current research topics and issues particular to Paediatric research.

Members of the intensive care research community and individuals working in the public sector (i.e. in a non-commercial setting) to improve outcomes for people with critical illness are invited to attend the meetings.
